Formal Assignment #3: Reflective Letter

Dear Student,

For your final formal assignment in our ENG 050 course, I invite you to write a letter addressed to me as your primary audience. The rhetorical purpose of this letter? I ask that your letter informs me about your learning experiences as a writer in our course. In this way, we can view your letter as a conversation you are sharing with me so we can both reflect on your being, doing, and knowing in our class.

In particular, I am curious to learn about the specific assignments, specific readings/films, specific conversations, and/or specific processes that helped you learn and grow as a writer. To that end, I'll ask that your letter focuses on these four components:

- Your author identity. How has it changed in this course?
- Your theory of writing. How has this course impacted the way you define and value writing?

Which composition concepts/terms do you most value?

- Your growth as a writer. How are your past academic writing experiences different from your present experiences with writing in this course? How are the past and present experiences the same? Please reference specific ENG 050 course writing assignments to illustrate your ideas.
- Your knowledge transfer to future writing situations. How do you plan to use your growing writing knowledge to compose texts in future academic and non-academic contexts?

Feel free to contact me with comments or questions at smangini@dccc.edu. I look forward to reading your reflective letter and to dialoguing with you during our final portfolio conference.

Sincerely,

Sabatino
